Registration Opened Jan. 1

All Must Register To Vote At Next Election

SACRAMENTO, CAL., January 2—(U. P.—Every voter in Redwood City must register again after January 1, if he expects to vote at the two state elections in 1930—the August primary and the November general election.

This announcement was made by Secretary of State Frank C. Jordan, who said that with the coming of the new year, the registrations of some 2,313,816 qualified electors in California are automatically cancelled.

At the presidential election in 1928 only 1,846,077 of these citizens exercised the privilege of voting, Jordan said. In San Mateo county, out of a total registration of 30,478 the total number of votes cast was 25,046.

"Any person who desires to sign one of the various initiative petitions which are now being circulated to place measures on the ballot must show himself to be newly registered after January 1," Jordan declared.

One of these proposed initiative acts, it was disclosed ,is the permanent registration law. This measure, supported by J. H. Zemansky, former registrar of voters of San Francisco, and W. M. Kerr, registrar of voters of Los Angeles county—the largest voting unit in California—has a number of prominent supporters.

The new act would give permanent registration to a voter only if he votes. In case he fails to exercise the right of franchise his registration is automatically cancelled.

A similar proposal failed of adoption by the 1920 legislature, after a vigorous fight. Objections were chiefly from county clerks, according to proponents of the bill, who did not wish to lose the extra compensation for registration ,or distribution of patronage to registration solicitors who are paid at the rate of so much per name.

Cummings of King street.

Behrens of this city, fell and suffered a broken arm while going to the train at Palo, when she was on her way to visit Mrs. Behrens. ADDITIONAL NAMES SECURED FOR PETITION

Seven Hundred Signatures Filed To Complete List of Signers Favoring Redistricting

Failure of the original petition, asking for a redistricting of county supervisoral districts, to bear sufficient signatures of qualified electors was made up Tuesday by the filing of a supplementary list of voters containing 700 names. The original petition was signed by 2696 registered voters, a check made by the office of County Clerk Elizabeth M. Kneese disclosed. This number was 326 short of the number required to make the petition a referendum.

With all unqualified signatures stricken from the petition and with the supplementary petition added the number of names will be in excess of the number required so that the matter may be presented to the board of supervisors at the first meeting of this month, January 6. At that time the board may either pass the redistricting ordinance proposed in the petition, or it may refer the matter to the people at a special election.

The proposed redistricting ordinance which accompanies the petition is designed to divide the county into supervisoral districts with population as nearly equal as possible without dividing any incorporated districts.

The proposed division of the county will be as follows:

In the first township the present precinct of San Pedro, which is the northernmost precinct on the coastside, would go to the fifth, or coastside district. The first district would lose Lomita Park, Millbrae and the north half of Burlingame. These, together with the south half of Burlingame, will constitute the second and largest district from the standpoint of population.

The third district will include Hillsborough, San Mateo and Beresford, which at present, together with part of Burlingame, are in the second district, but will give Belmont and San Carlos, at present in the second township, to the fourth or Redwood district. The fourth township will include these two and all of Redwood City.

The fifth township will extend from San Pedro on the north end of the coastside to the extreme southern end of the coastside, including the territory of San Pedro, Salada Beach, Halfmoon Bay, La Honda, Purissima, San Gregorio, Rockaway, Granada, Montara, Moss Beach, Princeton and Pescadero, and also will include much of that territory that is now Redwood City district, including Ravenswood, Atherton, Menlo Park, Fair Oaks, North Palo Alto, Woodside tand Portola.

The present division of the county was adopted in 1895, but due to the fact that the eastern side of county has increased in population much faster than the western side, the present representation on the board of supervisors is all out of proportion to the number of electors. The proposed ordinance is designed to remedy this condition. Under the proposed division the number of voters in each district would be nearly 6000 as possible.

J. Casanova Dies Of Wreck Injuries

Johnny Casanova, well-known football player and a brother of Leonard Casanova, Sequoia coach, died Monday at Eureka from injuries sustained in an automobile accident on Christmas day. The accident happened when the car in which Casanova was riding with his brother, Leonard, collided with one driven by J. A. Viera. He sustained severe internal injuries.

Efforts of doctors, including two blood transfusions, failed. The blood transfusions were given by Dolph Timmerman, University of California football star, and by Joe Oeschgar, baseball player, and a brother-in-law of Casanova.

Casanova was one of the outstanding players on the Santa Clara team. He was disqualified recently because of signing up to play professional baseball on his graduation from Santa Clara.

Young Casanova was a brother of Leonard Casanova, assistant football coach at the Sequoia Union High School in this city. In addito his brother, the young athlete is survived by his parents and three sisters.

Frank J. Griffin, boys' physical director at Sequoia, and Robert and Charles Clancy, both members of this season's football team at the school, were among the many from the peninsula district who attended the last rites for the deceased athlete. Many of the members of the Santa Clara football squad, including Alfred Terremere of this city, were among the mourners.

Four Injured In Atherton Wreck

Four persons were injured in an acident at Atherton Wednesday morning when a car crashed into a tree. Three of the persons were not severely injured; the fourth may have sustained internal injuries. All were from San Francisco. They were:

Miss Rosma Heiganz, 19, of 110 Frederick street; unconscious, possible fractured ribs and crushed chest.

Miss Elizabeth Smith, 19, of 132 Twenty ninth avenue; cuts and bruises.

Leo F. Hughes, 23, of 1569 Page street; fractured collar bone, severe cuts and bruises.

McKay, a young bond salesman, was host, inviting his three friends out for a ride in his new car. About 4 o'clock, at the intersection of Fair Oaks avenue and Middlefield road, Atherton, a passing car so blinded McKay that he did not observe a turn in the road in time and crashed into a tree. All were thrown out and the car overturned. The four were taken to the Comunity Hospital at Beresford by Fred Finnigan of 121 Sutter street. Excepting Miss Helganz, all were able to leave for their homes Wednesday afternoon.

Redwood Party Enjoys Hunt On Marsh At Alviso

Since the recent heavy rains those who participate in the pleasure of wild duck shooting have complained about the scarcity of birds, but the cold dry spell has brought thousands back into the bay, and when a party consisting of Arnold Hess, Jr., his wife, Mrs. Anita Hess, Emil Larroury and Claude Fox of this city returned from Alvarado Sunday evening the nimrods in this vicinity had a chance to feast their eyes on the finest bunch of webfoots brought in this season. The kill consisted of four limits, one hundred birds, thirty-five being sprig, three teal and the balance spoonbills.

Fox, who has just completed fifty years of continuous duck hunting on this peninsula, said to a reporter of this Times-Gazette. "It was the finest hunt I have had for many years and while I do not wish to detract from the shooting ability of either Arnold Hess or Emil Larroury, both of whom I consider expert wing shots, I wish to go on record as saying that mere man does not want to think for a single moment that he has no competitor in the shape of woman as an expert wing shot. Mrs. Hess shot from a duck boat tied up against the levee over a stool of 40 decoys. It was the first time I had ever seen a woman engaged in the sport I have followed for half a century and the apparent ease with which she pulled down the sprig and spoonbill with her 16-gauge Browning pump gun elicited not only my own praise, but that of her husband and Mr. Larrouy, as well."

Mr. and Mrs. Plahte of Spokane, Washington, are house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Steinke.

HIGH JINKS

EDITORIAL

TOO often we think of holidays, High Jinks, in anything but the true spirit of the occasion. This week on another page of the Times-Gazette is a message bringing us a little reminder of the part they play in or lives and the life of our town. It is worth our consideration.

We have known business men who spoke of holidays mainly as business wreckers for a day or two before and a week afterwards. Especially in the old days of saloons. We have known of others who spoke of them mainly in the light of temporary business spurts, and thought of them mainly in the light of the weather, and therefore trade conditions, at the time.

Holidays are all these things, but they really are vacation days, when we put on bright colored cloaks and bright colored thoughts and forget for the moment the pressing cares of the hour. But at that, are holidays the holidays we used to know in the days of our youth?

Another thought. What Redwood City needs among other things to develop its community personality is a community holiday time. Perhaps once a year, perhaps several times. On that occasion, if it be once or several, we will be hosts to our friends far and near. Not hosts in a business way. The business man who expects extra trade on that day or at that time is missing the spirit of the occasion. But the friendliness nurtured then cannot help but bring closer business relations in the fututre with our guests.

A series of community holidays during the year would be leavening in the dreary round of business workaday life. We have our present national, state and other holidays. Why not duly constituted holidays for our community with duly constituted purposes to be accomplished? Perhaps business would suffer that day but in the end all would gain. And the friendliness of our community would grow.

Whether or not we do have these holidays, let us keep in mind the proper spirit of holidays that we now enjoy. Let us carry the holiday spirit on holidays of course, and let us put as much of the holiday spirit into the workaday spirit of our community as we can. Let's follow the suggestion of our town seers and make the most of our holidays.

Five Machines Crash On Road At San Carlos

An odd course of circumstances resulted Wednesday evening in a crash of five cars at San Carlos and the injury of one pedestrian. The pedestrian, who later gave his name as Charles Linsly, 67, was said by witnesses to have been walking in the middle of the highway.

E. Monize, 479 Alden street, South San Francisco, driving a truck northward, swerved in an attempt to avoid hitting Linsly. Instead he struck the walking man and the truck swung around until it was obstructing most of the highway.

Alfred M. Bullard, 512 Brunswick street, San Francisco, driving north and J. A. Rowe, Palo Alto, driving south, in an attempt to go around the stalled truck, met head on and both cars were demolished.

A few minutes later H. E. Whidden, 298 Richland avenue, San Francisco, drove into the truck and his car was wrecked. Meanwhile E. O. Balzari of Davenport, Cal., had parked his car at the roadside, to investigate and see if help was needed. M. F. Bettincourt, a Santa Clara county rancher, driving homewards, smashed into Balzari's car and added to the general wreckage.

Linsly was taken to the Community hospital in Beresford, where little hope was given for his life. Bettincourt was arrested and booked at the jail here on a charge of driving while drunk.

Screen's Biggest Film Comming to Sequoia

Stars on parade!

Stars of stage and screen; stars of vaudeville, opera and radio; stars of all our wonderful twentieth century amusement media in the greatest cast ever assembled for one motion picture!

One by one they pass before you with dance, song or comic skit in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Hollywood Revue," the gigantic full-length, all-talking, singing and dancing feature coming to the Sequoia Theatre Tuesday for three days.

Twenty new song hits and novelty dances, abundant "gags" and laughs, tuneful melodies and dialoge that sparkles, to say nothing of the largest dancing chorus of beautiful girls that ever dazzled the bald-headed row.

This is the material Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has compounded into the greatest all-star musical attraction ever produced on stage or screen The talkie era moves fast indeed!

It is a Ziegfeld, Earl Carroll and George White show rolled into one with many deft motion picture touches, and because it is a motion picture, many cities and towns of the country off the beaten track of road productions, will witness a great reveue of revues, for the first time.

Sound technique's rapid development, the startling success of "The Broadway Melody," the transplantation of Broadway's stage and musical comedy stars as well as its "tin pan alley" to Hollywood—all these backed by the resources of a great studio, have wrought this wonder.

Redwood Man Takes Responsibilities On Tuesday

Earl Wilsey, well-known resident of this city, and for many years, chief deputy in the office of County Engineer George A. Kneese, on Tuesday took office as city manager of San Mateo. For the past month, since the resignation of City Manager Oscar Weisgerber, Wilsey has been getting his affairs in order for taking over the new position. On Tuesday he was administered the oath of office by City Clerk E. W. Foster and was presented with a gold badge of office by Mayor William H. Taylor.

Firemen Hosts At New Year's Dancing Party

The firemen made good their reputation again this year; that of having the best dance of all the year as their New Year's party. The affair, as usual, took place on the last day of the year, at the fire house, where about 260 people were gathered to see the old year out and the new one enter, in the most approved style.

Dancing occupied the evening until midnight when hundreds of baloons were released from above and hundreds of yards of colored serpentine were thrown upon the dancers. Also, the old fire bell of No. 1 Company, the first fire bell in Redwood City, did its only function of the year now, welcomed the new year in royal manner.

After midnight the guests were served delicious refreshments downstairs, while music furnished by the department's own musical organization, the "False Alarm Orchestra". Community singing of old time favorites was led by Mrs. Tony Prusch.

Following the supper dancing was resumed upstairs and continued to 4 o'clock.

The affair was arranged by the department headed by Chief Mark Ryan as chairman. The annual New Year dance is one of the outstanding social events of Redwood City, and the volunteer department is lavish in its entertainment of its guests.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Parkinson and child have returned to their home in Modesto after spending the holidays with Mrs. Parkinson's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Donovan, on Buckeye street.

FARM POULTRY

EGG PRODUCTION CUT BY SKIMPING

Fresh Water Must Be Furnished in Clean Vessels.

If Biddy is well-bred and properly managed, she will produce for her owner 144 eggs a year. But to lay those 12 dozen eggs weighing 18 pounds requires from 70 to 90 pounds of feed.

"Skimping on feed simply means that egg production is being cut down," says G. T. Klein, extension poultryman, Kansas State Agricultural college. "Out of every five pounds of feed a hen eats while in good laying condition, four pounds are used to maintain her body and one pound is turned into eggs."

Another item in egg production must be kept in mind—eggs cannot be produced unless the feed contains the materials from which eggs are made, cautions the poultry specialist. By way of strengthening this point, he says that an egg, exclusive of the shell, is made up of 74 per cent water; 15 per cent protein; 10 per cent fat, and 1 per cent mineral.

Water for the egg must be furnished by means of plenty of fresh water in clean drinking equipment.

Fat is made from grain and starchy feed.

Lime, found chiefly in the shell, comes from oyster shell or limestone.

In stressing the need for mash, Klein assures poultry raisers that if home-grown grains are used a ration composed of 100 pounds each of corn, wheat, and oats with 75 pounds of meat scraps added may be mixed for approximately $2.00.

High Ceilings Cause of Low Winter Production

Poultry experts at the Minnesota Agricultural college have found that high ceilings and much unused space above the hens are among the most common causes of low winter egg production. Hen houses are warmed with heat produced by the hens, and if too much unused space must be warmed, it uses up hen energy which otherwise might be used in producing eggs. This trouble is most easily remedied by building a straw loft in the hen house at a height of about six feet above the floor.

Besides making the house easier to heat, the straw loft absorbs moisture and helps to solve the ventilation problem. Simply nail boards or poles at the right height and cover them with at least two feet of straw. Burlapped or slatted windows should be left in each gable near the peak to carry off the moist air, or regular ventilating heads can be installed on top if desired. Plenty of fresh air will usually enter through cracks, around windows and doors, and around the outer edges of the straw loft.

Poultry Notes

Clean ground is the most important item in raising chicks successfully.

* * *

Mate the flocks three weeks before hatching eggs are desired to insure a high per cent of fertility.

* * *

* * *

Serious cases of feather plucking have been traced to lice infestation, and an examination of one or two birds will provide information on this point. Where such a state exists the remedy is obvious.

* * *

Houses located and built to promote sanitation, provide comfortable quarters with fresh air and to admit direct sunlight (unfiltered through ordinary glass) add materially to the content of the owner.

* * *

It is quite probable that the pullets will lay enough more eggs when kept by themselves to compensate for the few less eggs the hens will lay if allowed to range in winter.

* * *

Flock owners who trapnest some of their layers will want to make sure that the birds get credit for every egg that is laid.

* * *

Anyone with experience knows that where pullets and hens are housed together the pullets fail to develop as well as when kept by themselves.

* * *

Where they are to be sold as green ducks at ten to twelve weeks, the young ducks are usually not allowed to range but are fed heavily from the first.

Free range on ground that is clean and free from disease producing organism is much better for hens than confinement in houses.

* * *

If the poultry house is in good condition, put the pullets in in September. If it is dirty and full of mites leave them out.

* * *

Both geese and duck eggs should be dipped once daily in lukewarm water, beginning the eleventh day of incubation, as a guard against goslings' and ducklings' dying in the shell unless ducks or geese are used to hatch them.

* * *

When duck eggs are not sufficiently turned during incubation, the ducklings are apt to die in the shell. Hens are unable to turn them when the eggs are large, and it is therefore best to mark them on one side, and examine the nest daily.

Pets Out of the Ordinary

Washington.—Like Hamelin of legendary fame, Washington has its "Pied Piper," whose interest in rodents goes far beyond merely piping them out of town.

Rats may be but mere rats to cats and queens, but to Dr. Vernon Bailey, chief field naturalist, bureau of biological survey, Department of Agriculture, there are as many different kinds of rats and mice as there are different types of men, with a variety of habits and interests as diversified as those found among the human species.

Doctor Bailey has just returned from extensive field service in the deserts and plains of Arizona and New Mexico, where he has been studying a variety of animals in their habitats. With particular pride Doctor Bailey tells of his capture of a rare species of horned toad, which he picked up on the Kaibab plateau, north of the Grand Canyon.

The queer little creature, which is not a toad, but a lizard and closely related to the snake family, now is resting in the sands of an artificial home provided for it in the National museum.

"This species of horned toad," Doctor Bailey said, "would make a lovely pet for children. It is gentle and perfectly harmless and has great value in the fact that it destroys and lives on insects."

In his home Doctor Bailey has provided a room for the use and study of small animals, those of the rodent family in particular. "I have had kangaroo rats, pocket mice, grasshopper mice, deer mice and meadow mice," the doctor stated in answer to a query as to what kind of mice he thought made the best pets. "I have no use for white mice or white rats," he continued. "They are merely the albino members of the ordinary wharf rat and house mouse family, which are contemptible, filthy and destructive animals."

Doctor Bailey explains that the house or wharf rat and its cousin, the mouse, are as different from the little pets kept by him in his home as are the criminals of the human race from their intellectual and constructive brethren.

"The house mouse and the wharf rat are not indigenous to this country in the first place," said the doctor. "They have been brought to America from the old country. The American species which I have mentioned usually are wood animals, with clean habits and of value as insect exterminators.

"If one knows how to handle them they make nice pets, as they are clean and gentle. Take the grasshopper mouse, for instance. He lives mainly on insects and other mice. If you put one in your basement he will keep the house free of cockroaches, bugs, spiders and house mice. The grasshopper mouse will not climb into your foodstuffs, nor destroy things as the common house mouse. He also, is very useful in fields, where he destroys insects but will not harm the crops."

Although Doctor Bailey has kept the little white footed deer mice as pets in the outfitted cages which he keeps for his animals, he does not recommend them as pets, as they are very timid and shy and do not become domesticated as quickly as do some of the other varieties.

The kangaroo rat, so-called because of its long hind legs and its ability to jump, makes a particularly pleasing pet, as it is a gentle little animal with clean habits. A peculiarity of the kangaroo rat is that it never drinks any water. It comes from a part of the desert country where there may not be rainfall for as long as three years. The animal gets its moisture from plants, bulbs and roots.

Youth Makes "Pal" of Ghost

London.—A jovial ghost who obligingly produces money from thin air, eats apples and leaves his (her or its) teeth marks in the core, and throws ink bottles when she (or it) is angry, is said to be the constant companion of a ten-year-old boy who lives in Poona, India.

The story was related before the National Laboratory of Psychical Research by Miss Helen Kohn, a B. A. of London university. The boy, said Miss Kohn, is her young nephew. Damodar Ketkar, who was adopted by Miss Kohn's sister when he was four.

The youngster is coming to England soon, and the National Laboratory is arranging to have a committee of reputable London doctors investigate his ghostly companion.

"Sometimes," said Miss Kohn, "the manifestations are harmless and at other times definitely destructive. There was a time when it seemed that this mysterious spirit was making a determined attempt on the boy's life.

"Things were smashed so rapidly with no human explanation, that Damodar had to be fed by hand and all glass objects had to be removed. As the child moved through the room he was surrounded by broken glass, and scattered liquids, particularly saccharine, to which the spirits appeared to have an especial aversion.

"Once Damodar put out some fruit for his ghost. In a few moments it had disappeared and later the skins were flung from nowhere bearing the marks of teeth.

"Another time a five rupee note suddenly appeared in the air in the middle of a dinner party. Nobody claimed it and it was marked and locked in a trunk. It disappeared and was never found."

MISTAKEN IDENTITY

By THOMAS ARKLE CLARK
Dean of Men, University of Illinois.

It is flattering for any academic person like myself, for instance, to be mistaken for some one of real importance, or even for a representative of some outstanding business or profession. Sometimes when I am traveling a stranger sits down beside me and inquires what line I am carrying. It gives a mere college official a momentary sense of satisfaction to be taken for a business man. Once I was said, by a man who must have been nearsighted, to resemble a successful railroad president, and I walked with more than ordinary dignity for a week at least had any real experience in business.

It is not so pleasant when passing strangers see in us a resemblance to some one more commonplace than we are wont to consider ourselves. One can stand being mistaken for the president of the institution, but when one is asked by a confused visitor if he is the head janitor, pride suddenly turns a flip-flop.

I was walking down the street on which I live one day after office hours, when a young fellow caught up with me and accosted me.

"Haven't I seen you some place before?" he inquired, looking me over with a searching glance.

"It is possible," I admitted. "I have been other places."

We walked on, the young man's me another appraising glance and said:

"Are you the cashier at Ernie's restaurant?"

I then assured him that I had never

The doctor on the Ventura who really holds a rank equal to that of the first mate was leaning back in his chair in a most impressive way when a young boy came running up to him.

"Are you the deck steward?" he inquired eagerly.

"No," the doctor replied, angrily.

"Do you know where he is?"

"I do not, and I don't care," the dignified official replied shortly—for you see, the doctor is an important official upon a trans-ocean passenger ship, and the deck steward, in spite of the gratuities he receives, is a person of humble station. It is humiliating for anyone to be taken for some one of less importance than himself, but much more for a ship doctor who holds himself of great importance.

"Children these days are not taught respect for anyone or anything," he confided to me when the searcher for the deck steward had passed on. It may be so, but I wondered what the man's reaction would have been had the youth mistaken him for the captain. I suspect he would have drawn the conclusion, which is not far from the truth if the truth were told, that the youth of today is very discriminating, sees through subterfuge and recognizes real worth when he sees it.

At one time or another most of us like to feel that we are something else than what we really are—younger or wiser or more prominent or at least deserving of more prominence, and when some stranger seems to see in us these qualities and confirms our opinion, we are flattered and pleased.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Dye From Insects

Cochineal is a dye which is obtained from the bodies of tiny insects, collected from some species of the cactus plant where they gather in large numbers. They are killed by heat, then added to ammonia water and placed over boiling water uncovered to allow part of the ammonia to evaporate. The resulting "cochineal paste" is used for dyeing.

The Inefficient Executive

The executive whose desk is clear, and who always seems to be calm, impresses me as efficient. The one who is rushing around and all the time trying to catch up never seems to be quite on the job. His desk is covered with papers and he is always out of breath. I was discussing with the former type the other day his duties, and he remarked he had none.

"I am just around here," he said. "In case a fire starts. Then I am on hand to put it out."

He meant that the business would ordinarily run smoothly without him if properly organized, and he was there to straighten out tangles.

A well known writer of crook stories manages a large office in Midtown where he serves refreshments and makes friends of both cops and crooks from both of whom he gathers his material. Recently he was having a quiet drink with a well known crook. Two detectives entered his office and were delighted to meet the other guest face to face.

"I want you," announced one of the detectives. "We've been looking for you for two months."

"No you don't," declared the writer. "This is neutral ground, and you are all guests here. If you want this man, you give him an hour's start. Sit here and have a drink with me while he is on his way."

"We can't let this fellow go," answered the detective. "Not this bird We've been seeking him too long."

"Listen," said the writer. "I've got as much on you as you've got on this fellow. Now you are going to do as I say and give him a chance. We will all sit down and have a drink together and then you will wait here."

The writer had his way, and, after the crook had been on his way an hour the two detectives left. In telling me this story the writer added:

"All that yegg needed was three minutes' start, and they would never catch him."

Reason Why

The constant sprouting of skyscrapers causes any number of persons to write to newspapers, asking why windows in new buildings are made opaque by soap or other material. This practice, incidentally, has become refined. No longer does each window have a cross marked on it. Instead it is neatly painted with its own initials. The reasons for marking up the glassware are threefold: They serve as advertisements, prevent workmen from pushing lumber through the panes, and serve to show cracks or flaws.

Just a Joke

Hartford Powel, Jr., an advertising man who has turned novelist—witness his "Married Money"—does not lose his advertising instincts in the fiction game. When his "Married Money" was published, he dedicated individual copies to various literary editors. Each dedication page bore the words, "To So-and-so for his high services to literature." Most of the literary editors appreciated it as a good-humored prank, but some seriously believed that every copy bore the same dedication.

Chance Query Recovers Ring Lost Six Years

Edgerton, Minn.—A ring, lost for six years, was restored to Mrs. Wiekerard because she said the right thing at the right time. While a tenant occupying the farm formerly rented by Mrs. Wiekerard was visiting at her home she asked: "Did any one ever find a ring on your place? I lost one there about six years ago." Thereupon the visitor pulled the ring from his pocket and told that he had found it two years ago but never knew its owner.

"HOLIDAYS!"

What does the word mean to us? What thoughts does it bring? High Jinks—a panorama of joys and happiness on the holidays throughout the year.

Christmas: Bulging stockings, hung precariously by the glowing fireside; a wealth of packages mysteriously wrapped; Santa Claus; good cheer and fellowship.

Thanksgiving: Stuffed turkey; plum pudding and cranberry sauce; the family together; the spirit of giving thanks.

Independence Day—"The Glorious Fourth!": Waving flags; parades; the Spirit of '76 relived! Picnics, and electrical displays!

The play-days of a nation! High Jinks! Over one-sixth of our days, yearly, are days of rest and play.

Without them, this would indeed be a "work-a-day" world. To them can be attributed a large share of our pleasures and "the better things of life."

They mean much to us; and they mean much to business, too. For, as we look to holidays for additional pleasure, recreation and rest, so too, do business men look to them for additional business.

Holiday clothes; holiday food; holiday playthings. Extra "dress-up" clothes; extra food luxuries; a hundred and one EXTRA things and materials that make holidays REAL.

And just as holidays mean much to each of us and to business, so, too, do they mean much to the community. Holidays bring the town extra business; they bring visitors; they are the town's "dress-up" days. They are "community-pride" and "community-spirit" days. Let's make the most of them.

All of us join together with the wish that holidays be made days of real devotion, recreation, pleasure and rest in

Waste of Time the Worst Form of Thriftlessness

By S. W. STRAUS,

President American Society for Thrift

THE trend of the times is toward shorter working hours. More and more leisure time is being allowed all types of toilers.

In the days of our grandfathers there was only a limited amount of time available to most people for recreation. The hours of toil were long. Conditions of the present, however, represent a decided improvement because, as a general rule, people are making use of their spare time to good advantage.

In the midst of this changing order it should not be forgotten that there can be neither progress nor happiness without work. Our spare time should be made use of to make ourselves the capable of doing the work we have mapped out for our lives. Otherwise we shall be going backwards.

The great Mussolini recently said, "I, myself, work hard" while to our own Thomas A. Edison was credited the observation that "genius is 10 per inspiration and 90 per cent perspiration."

There is no real pleasure greater than that which comes from successful accomplishment. No matter in what line of activity we may find ourselves, we should realize that performing our daily tasks to the best of our ability brings far greater contentment of mind than could possibly come from idleness.

There is no true happiness in an idle life. Waste of time is a form of thriftlessness that is as destructive of rightful pleasure as waste of money or waste of health.

Work alone brings happiness, because work is creative and upbuilding.

All the instincts of the human race which have been responsible for humanity's progress have found their real fulfillment in work.

PRAYER FOR EDITORS

THIS is the "invocation" delivered by Rev. T. D. Bateman, of the First Presbyterian church, Columbus, Miss., at the annual convention of the Mississippi Press Association, held in that city:

"Eternal God, our Heavenly Father, we ask thy blessing upon these newspaper people who are wont to communicate with the ends of the earth. They are people who can smell a revolution in China, people who have a license to enter the gates of princes and potentates, but who will have a mighty hard time getting inside the gates of Paradise.

"Have mercy on these people who are tempted by every devil, from the printer's devil to the devils of newspaper headlines, and these same who are so busy listening to the sounds of the wires and the songs of women that offtimes the voice of God finds no listener among them and no place in their hearts.

"Have mercy, O Lord, upon the people who are chased by the Colonial Dames, W. C. T. U. Kiwanis, and Chamber of Commerce. Have mercy on these people who have to hobnob alike with Jew and Gentile, white and black, Democrat and Republican, Baptist, Methodist, Presybyterian and Episcopalian, those who came over on the Mayflower, those who came over in the Cauliflower.

"Have mercy, O Lord, on these people and help them in their dash from ballroom to church social and back to rum-runners, and who have to associate with anybody from Andy Mellon to Andy Gump. Any of them would walk two miles for a good story.

"Make this a good convention in the Friendly City. It's an easy matter to break into the Commercial Dispatch. But how will some of them break into the Pearly Gates? We pray Thy blessings upon them. When they have done with newspapers here and stories and their cares are finished here, may they have a finer story for St. Peter than they ever had in newspapers here. And though it is so hard for newspaper men to get into the Kingdom, may they receive a warmer welcome in Jerusalem than they do in Columbus today. Amen."

The First Gun Is Fired

Dy D. E. O'KEEFE

THE gubernatorial campaign this year promises to be very interesting, exciting and bitter, probably as sharp and as harsh as the famous contest in 1894 when Morris M. Estee, the Republican candidate and James H. Budd, the democratic standard bearer clashed, the former going down to defeat. All the filth, scurrility, falsehood and skullduggery known to political campaigns at that period were thrown into the superheated contest. It was some time before both political parties recovered from its effects. Budd was the last democratic governor, the party failing to elect one since.

This year there will be many alignments, numerous political scores to even among the various factions of the state and sectional lines will also be closely drawn. The south will want the governor while the north will give battle to hold the plum which it has retained since 1903 when Henry T. Gage from Los Angeles went out of office.

Governor Young will no doubt seek re-election. With his massive organization he will be a formidable candidate. He will be aligned with Senator Johnson. The followers of the latter will support Young, while on the other hand the adherents of Ex-Governor Friend W. Richardson are to support the strongest candidate against this combination and at present it looks as if Buron Fitts of Los Angeles will be the man. Should he fail to run, then Richardson is to be the banner bearer.

To a casual observer it would appear that the candidates will be Young, Fitts and Ray L. Riley who has already announced his candidacy. Riley hails from San Bernardino and thus will lay claim to the southern vote, while Fitts will demand it. Thus we have the ballot of the south divided. With Young, Riley and Fitts in the running, Fitts will win. The tremendous vote south of the Techacheppi will put him over the hurdles. However should James Rolph, Jr., the popular mayor of San Francisco, enter the contest, then Fitts' apple cart would be upset. The mayor has a large following in all sections of the state, even in Los Angeles, he has an army of adherents. With Rolph in the race it is no telling who would win. The vote would be so split up that it would be anyone's battle.

Rolph will be free from entanglements. He is to be a free lance as will be Riley. There will be many contending foes against the Young-Johnson combination. There will be the following of Senator S. M. Shortridge who have not forgotten Johnson's campaign against Shortridge four years ago. Senator Shortridge is to take no part in the contest but may not be able to restrain his admirers in their fight against the senior senator. Then there are the followers of President Herbert Hoover, who think Senator Johnson did not throw his full strength into the campaign for the Presidents a litle over a year ago. He made several speeches, but the Hoover adherents thought he should have done more. The President is to take no part whatever in the coming campaign. His hands are to be entirely off.

With these alignments, combinations and sectional hatred California may look to a heated and virulent gubernatorial campaign next summer. May the best man win.

Selection

WE exist, in our present civilization, by reason of the willingness of others to give us those things that we require in exchange for something we have to offer.

If we have nothing to offer that others want then we must turn our attention to the production of things they do want.

Each day the world is saying to young women who would become movie actresses: "There isn't room for you in this profession. We're short of waitresses, though. You can get a living behind the counter."

This seems cruel, but how could we find our places otherwise? Under this system everything is kept in balance. We get just about the right number of farmers, mechanics, laborers, acrobats and cabaret entertainers. When we get tired of saxophone players we will send them back to barbering and piano moving.

Town Killers

PEOPLE will kill a town: Those who oppose improvements. Those who run it down to strangers. Those who never advertise their business. Those who distrust public-spirited men. Those who show no hospitality to anyone. Those who hate to see others make money. Those who oppose every improvement that doesn't originate with themselves. Those who put on a extra long face when a stranger talks of locating in their town. Those who oppose every public enterprise that does not appear to be of personal benefit to themselves.

Facts About the Telephone

New York City uses the telephone to the extent of 3,000,000 calls a day.

More than 284,000,000 local calls and 6,600,000 out-of-town calls were made during 1928 over the Bell System wires in the state of Virginia.

In 1910, there were 360,000 telephones in service in New York City. Now there are over 1,700,000 and telephone engineers anticipate that the 3,000,000 mark will be reached by 1945.

On New Year's Day of this year, Fred Delye of Monroe, Mich., at the age of eighty-nine, made his first telephone call. The call was over Long Distance with his daughter, Mrs. William Palmer in Toledo, O.

The private yacht of W. L. Mellon, Pittsburgh banker and nephew of Andrew Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, the Vagabondia, has its own complete telephone system, with a telephone in every room.

The rainfall for the recent storm was 2.10 of an inch against 5.29 inches at this time last year.

WOODSIDE

The Woodside Sunday school held its Christmas celebration last Friday night. There was an interesting program of song and recitation by th e pupils, a Christmas story by the minister, Mr. St. John, a playlet in which Santa Claus visited the school, in which the part of school teacher was played by Edith Ferrari and that of Santa Claus by Wesley Christensen.

Mrs. A. Goularte and her son, Joe, spent the Christmas holidays with relatives in Santa Rosa.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Morshead celebrated with a family gathering at the home in the Portola hills last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Harris and family and Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Moffitt and family were among those of our summer colony to return to Woodside for the holidays.

Mr. and Mrs. Ettore Avenali and family, the very last of the summer residents to leave Woodside for the attractions of the city, also returned to spend their vacation here.

Louis Bellmont, the worthy village blacksmith, has moved his habitation from the foot to the summit of the Woodside grade. He has taken the house recently vacated by Sam Bozzo who has moved to Palo Alto.

Rudolph Schilling, Jr. is spending a week in the Yosemite Valley.

The most enjoyable children's party ever given in Woodside was tendered to the children of the Woodside school on New Years Day by Mr. and Mrs. George Whittell. The large swimming pool, which is enclosed and electrically heated, was the scene of the festivities. The cement pool had been drained, a great tree set up in the center and four long tables laden with the things that children best like to eat awaited the guests. The tree was elaborately and beautifully decorated and thickly strung with winking colored lights, giving a look of fairy land to the place. The part of Santa Claus was taken by a professional entertainer from a theatrical agency in San Francisco. After the children had filled themselves to the limit of their respective capacities from the good things on the table, Santa Claus brought into view another table loaded with presents and calling the name of each child in the school he presented each boy and girl with a handsome prisent and a box of candy. It will be a long time before the children forget their entertainment by the Whittells. Presiding over the affair and insuring the happiness of each child there, were Mrs. George Whittell, Mrs. Whittell, Sr., and Miss Marjorie Josselyn.

WORLD'S STRANGEST HOUSE NOT FAR FROM SAN JOSE

Winchester House Is Called California Curiosity

SACRAMENTO, Jan. 2 —(UP)— One of the strangest structures in the world, the famous "Winchester Mystery House," situated 3 miles west of San Jose, should be more generally exploited as a California curiosity, according to a recommendation before Governor Young's office today.

Built by Mrs. Sarah L. W. Winchester, widow of the late Oliver F. Winchester, firearms manufacturer, this unique building cost several millions of dollars. For 36 years it remained unfinished. Mrs. Winchester holding to the idea that if she erected a home on which work never ceased, she would never die.

As the building stands today, it contains 160 rooms and thousands of doors and windows—handiwork of carpenters and painters who were kept at work continually for nearly half a century.

Scores of stairways may be found all over the place. Many, like the hangman's gallows, have only 13 steps. Strange closets, hundreds of them, scores of fireplaces, blind chimneys and elevators are to be found. Mysterious trapdoors, queer sliding panels and doors opening into blank space remind one of a modern detective "thriller." Many of the rooms have 13 chandeliers. These chandeliers have 13 lights, the ceilings have 13 panels, and there are 13 bathrooms in all.

No money apparently was spared in materials for construction. Beautifully designed art glass windows and doors, imported, have the glass inlaid with German silver and bronze, while many of the windows and front entrance doors cost from $1000 to $2000 each.

In place of signs on the gates warning strangers to "Keep Out" as when Mrs. Winchester was living, guides now escort many visitors through this strange structure daily.

During the owner's life, the various warerooms were filled with beautiful materials, dress goods, household linen, light fixtures, imported art glass, high grade finish woods, including costly cedar, oak, ash, walnut, mahogany, maple, cherry and rosewood. There was a large quantity of hardware, shutters, screen tile, plumbing and ornamental fixtures—all designed to carry on the building program which Mrs. Winchester visioned would continue throughout eternity.

ARTICLE No. 12

In the preceding article problem hands were given illustrating end plays. Simple as they were, they have puzzled some of our readers so the following solutions should be closely studied:

(a) If hearts are trumps and Z is in the lead, how can Y Z win one trick against any defense?

(b) If hearts are trumps and either A or B is in the lead, how can A B win all of the tricks?

(a) Solution: Y Z can win one trick by the lead of the eight of clubs by Z. Y should trump with the queen of hearts. B must over-trump with the ace so that Z must now make the jack of hearts.

(b) Solution: If either A or B is in the lead, hearts should be led and won in A's hand with the king. A can then lead either the ten of diamonds or seven of clubs which B should trump with the four of hearts. B should then lead the ace of hearts, dropping Z's jack and thus enabling B to win the balance of the tricks. This end play was given to show the importance of the lead. Very frequently it is worth a trick or more to have one hand or the other in the lead, so be careful to figure out in advance, if possible, whether or not it is advantageous to obtain the lead yourself or allow your partner or an opponent to do so.

There are no trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z make all of the tricks against any defense?

Solution: Z should lead the ten of hearts and discard the eight of spades from Y's hand. Z should now lead the deuce of spades and A is forced to discard. If he discards the six of diamonds, Y should discard the nine of clubs and Y's ace of diamonds and Z's jack of diamonds will thus win the balance of the tricks. If A discards the ace of clubs, Y should discard the trey of diamonds and Y will thus win the balance of the tricks. No matter what A discards at trick two, Y Z can win the balance of the tricks. This end play is given to show the importance of forcing the opponents to discard. Very frequently tricks can be gained by so doing.

Clubs are trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z win three of the four tricks against any defense?

Solution: Z should lead the nine of hearts and discard the king of diamonds from Y's hand. Z should now lead the ace of diamonds. A should trump this trick with the ten of clubs and Y should over-trump with the jack. Y should now lead the jack of spades and no matter what B plays, Y Z must win one more trick.

If at trick two, A refuses to trump the ace of diamonds, Y should trump with the deuce of clubs and lead the jack of spades. B can either trump with the queen of clubs, in which case Y's jack of clubs is good, or trump with the trey of clubs, in which case Z over-trumps with the four of clubs. In either case Y Z must therefore win three tricks.

This end play is given to show the necessity at times of trumping your partner's tricks in order to get into an advantageous position yourself, or to place your partner in that position. For example, suppose at trick two both A and Y refused to trump the ace of diamonds. In that case Z can lead a trump or the deuce of hearts. If the former, A B must win two trump tricks no matter how Y plays. If Z leads the deuce of hearts, A should discard and no matter which trump Y plays, B can over-trump and thus enable A B to win two tricks. Note this end play carefully for it is a tricky one.

Spades are trumps and Z is in the lead. How can Y Z win two of the three tricks against any defense?

Solution: Z should lead the deuce of spades. If A plays the trey of spades, Y should play the four. If A plays the ten of spades, Y should play the queen. In either case, B is forced in the lead, either with the seven or king of spades. He must win this trick or Y Z will win all three tricks.

Having won this trick, B can lead either a spade or a diamond. If he leads the spade, Z wins the trick with the ace and Y's king of hearts must win the next trick. If B should lead the king of diamonds, Z should discard the queen of hearts and A is forced to trump. As Y just overplayed A's trump on the first trick, he can still do so no matter what was played on the first trick. As a result Y must thus win trick two and Z's ace of spades must win trick three. In this way Y Z must win two of the three tricks. This end play is given to show the importance of throwing one opponent in the lead so that he is forced to lead a suit to his disadvantage.

Other end plays will be given from time to time, but the best way to profit from these example hands is to be on the lookout for opportunities in actual play.

During the year just ended the number of marriage licenses issued by the county clerk's office was 897. The total fees collected by the office was $28,825.73. The number of divorces filed was 197. Also 9 annulments were granted and two septarte maintenances allowed. The number of civil and criminal actions filed was 1894; probate 314. By this it will be seen that the clerk's office was a busy place all last year. There is certain to be a big increase in the various activities of the office during this year.

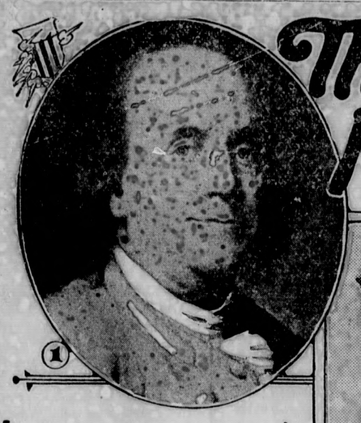
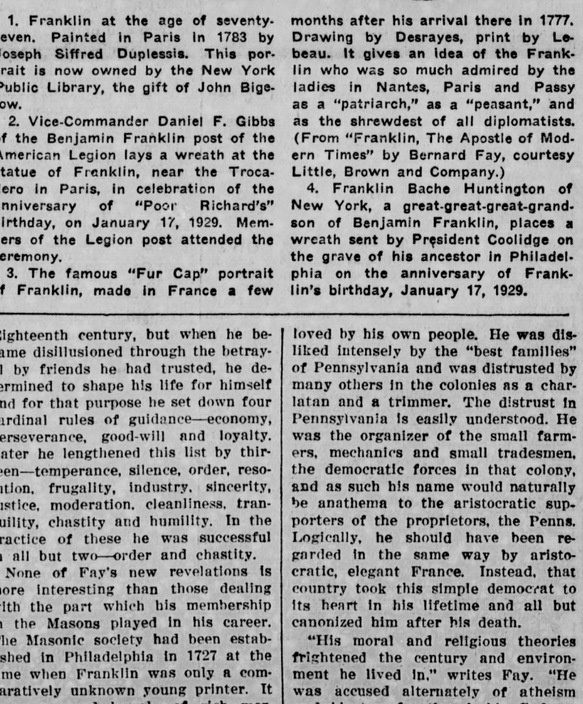
The Apostle of Modern Times





By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

AT THE time Benjamin Franklin was living in France he once said that his face was as familiar there as the moon. And that was not overstating the case. For, in their enthusiasm for this American, the French could not find out too much about him. The newspapers carried column upon column about him; historians and biographers vied with each other in writing about his career and he was pictured in innumerable engravings.

The flood of Franklin literature that started then has continued ever since, especially in his native land. Few Americans have been more written about than Benjamin Franklin, until it would seem that American historians and biographers had exhausted the possibility of telling anything new about him. But it has remained for a brilliant French scholar to write a new biography which studies the whole field of his life and activities in the light of innumerable documents, among them more than six hundred letters, hitherto unpublished, and which presents what is probably the most complete view of Benjamin Franklin that has yet been written. The author is Bernard Fay and the book is "Franklin, The Apostle of Modern Times," published by Little, Brown and Company of Boston.

Out of this new work, based upon facts which have been gathered together for the first time, emerges a new Franklin. The Franklin which Americans have hitherto known has always been a figure which challenges our admiration because he was such a versatile, many-sided man. But "human" as was this Eighteenth century character, he has not always been understandable to Twentieth century Americans. Through the interpretation of Professor Fay he becomes more understandable and more easily understood. But the title of the book gives the clew to the reason why—Franklin was "the apostle of modern times." Another historian, Philip Guedalla, once characterized Franklin as "the first Rotarian" and Professor Fay phrases the same thought in these words "His career was the apotheosis of the good fellow."

"The innumerable facts that I have gathered here for the first time bring us closer to Franklin and show him to be more picturesque, more in contrast to the background of his epoch, the Eighteenth century," he writes in his preface. "This biography is neither local nor national, but is the story of one of the great leaders of men in the Eighteenth century. Thus, one can judge and estimate his immense influence, which was also varied, as he dominated the political, scientific and philosophic world of his time. But of all his titles to glory, the most outstanding one is that he was the first bourgeois of the world.

"In this Eighteenth century which attempted to do away with aristocracy, and to orient itself to the domination of the middle-class, Franklin was the great precursor, the great example. He defined the principles of the bourgeois in his works, and made his life a pattern to follow. He exemplified it by Poor Richard and this was why the entire universe submitted to his influence. To understand the amplitude and importance of this influence, Franklin had to be considered from an international standpoint, and his activity in science, religion and philosophy had to be fully studied."

Considered from that standpoint, Franklin stands revealed not as a provincial Yankee who glorified common sense, as so many of his biographers have portrayed him, nor simply as a great American, but one of the great men of his century and a man who lived in perfect harmony with his times, even though in his wisdom and his foresight he was far in advance of his times.

Professor Fay's use of the new Franklin material which he discovered has enabled him to clear up many matters in regard to Franklin's religion, morals and social activities which have heretofore been but little understood. As to his religious beliefs it can now be seen that he believed in a Supreme Being. He regarded Jesus as a great moral teacher and in regard to the immortality of the soul he subscribed to the Pythagorean doctrine of survival in a new body with new senses and new ideas. That belief is reflected in the epitaph which he wrote for himself early in life and which reads:

The Body
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN,
Printer,
(Like the cover of an old book,
Its contents torn out,
And stript of its lettering and gilding,)
Lies here, food for worms.
Yet the work itself shall not be lost,
For it will, as he believed, appear once more,
In a new
And more beautiful edition,
Corrected and amended
By The Author.

A deist in his early life, he believed that man could do no evil in a world where all events were foreordained by the Deity and that man therefore should take his pleasure where he found it. That belief was strengthened by his experiences in the notoriously immoral London of the early Eighteenth century, but when he became disillusioned through the betrayal by friends he had trusted, he determined to shape his life for himself and for that purpose he set down four cardinal rules of guidance—economy, perseverance, good-will and loyalty. Later he lengthened this list by thirteen—temperance, silence, order, resolution, frugality, industry, sincerity, justice, moderation, cleanliness, tranquility, chastity and humility. In the practice of these he was successful in all but two—order and chastity.

None of Fay's new revelations is more interesting than those dealing with the part which his membership in the Masons played in his career. The Masonic society had been established in Philadelphia in 1727 at the time when Franklin was only a comparatively unknown young printer. It was composed largely of rich merchants who did not look with favor upon Franklin. But he forced his way into the society (by showing how effectively he could use his newspaper against it, if its members kept him out) and his Masonic affiliations helped win for him the position of postmaster general of the colonies and later it smoothed his path when he went to England on his first diplomatic mission there.

It was even more valuable when he was sent to France to enlist French aid for the colonies during the Revolution. "Through the Masons he had access to the newspapers which were officially controlled by the government, but which were really written by the Masons and the philosophers, such as Morellet, Suard, De la Dixmerie, who were all Franklin's friends," says Fay. "Practically all of the French newspapers published outside of France were in the hands of the Masons also." Franklin had his writings accepted by all of these and, being the master propagandist that he was, he made the most of his opportunity to present America's cause to Europe.

The career of Benjamin Franklin is one of the strangest paradoxes in history. One of them is that this son of a poor Boston candlemaker and apprentice to a poor printer should live to record the fact that "Tho' I did not think that I should ever literally stand before kings . . . I have stood before five, and even had the honor of sitting down with one, the King of Denmark, to dinner." Another is the fact that a man who was almost entirely self-educated should have universities of two continents vying with each other in conferring upon him honorary degrees.

But most interesting of all is the fact that this man who was so typically American that he became a veritable symbol of America, even in his lifetime, was never understood or loved by his own people. He was disliked intensely by the "best families" of Pennsylvania and was distrusted by many others in the colonies as a charlatan and a trimmer. The distrust in Pennsylvania is easily understood. He was the organizer of the small farmers, mechanics and small tradesmen, the democratic forces in that colony, and as such his name would naturally be anathema to the aristocratic supporters of the proprietors, the Penns. Logically, he should have been regarded in the same way by aristocratic, elegant France. Instead, that country took this simple democrat to its heart in his lifetime and all but canonized him after his death.

"His moral and religious theories frightened the century and environment he lived in," writes Fay. "He was accused alternately of atheism and bigotry, for though his God resembled its parent, the Christian Divinity, it had distinct differences. When, at length, Franklin had many adherents, it was because of a double misunderstanding; in America, he was followed because he was believed to be a Christian; in France, because he was classed with the atheists. . . ."

One incident in this career of paradoxes and contrasts is especially interesting. One day in January, 1774, a group of 35 members of the privy council of England sat in the Cockpit tavern in London and listened while a fiery little Scotchman, Alexander Wedderburn, denounced as a scoundrel another man who sat by the fireplace and listened, unmoved, to the denunciation. He was a stout, homely man, dressed in a fine new suit of Manchester velvet, and wearing a large new wig. He was Benjamin Franklin, postmaster general of the American colonies, come to London to present his plan for a federal empire. But he had failed to convince the "legalistic Englishmen," had been shorn of his official post, threatened with imprisonment, regarded with suspicion by both England and the colonies and his heart was heavy with a sense of failure and disgrace. . . . Four years later the same man stepped up to a table in the Hotel de Lautrec, Paris, to sign the historic treaty of alliance between France and the new nation which was to help win for that nation its freedom from England, a loss which Great Britain might not have suffered had those "legalistic Englishmen" not been swayed by the harangue of the fiery little Scotchman. Onlookers at the treaty-signing scene may not have noticed Franklin's clothes particularly at that time. But he was wearing the same suit of Manchester velvet—a little frayed and worn, but the same suit that he had worn when he sat by the fireplace in the Cockpit tavern. As one historian has said "It was the perfect gesture."

3. The famous "Fur Cap" portrait of Franklin, made in France a few months after his arrival there in 1777. Drawing by Desrayes, print by Lebeau. It gives an idea of the Franklin who was so much admired by the ladies in Nantes, Paris and Passy as a "patriarch," as a "peasant," and as the shrewdest of all diplomatists. WHY WE BEHAVE LIKE HUMAN BEINGS

By GEORGE DORSEY, Ph. D., LL. D.

Death as an "Advantageous Adaptation"

WEISMANN held that death is an "advantageous adaptation." For what? To whom? Looks like nonsense. Osler said that man is as old as his arteries. There was enough truth in this to make it take. It means even less to say that man is as old as his endocrine glands. Arteries and glands are as old as the man.

Metchinikoff held that because of "disharmonies" in the body, the phagocytes devoted too much time to eating pigment in hair and too little to the bacterial flora of our digestive tract. Result: fermentation, poison, death.

Puberty is a period, but a kind of sex life begins at birth; for many, real sexual maturity never comes. So it is with adults; some are more adult in body and mind at fifteen than others at thirty-five; some hurry through to senility before body and mind have become fully adult. Normal old age is physiological; it is no more a disease than adolescence, and should be as agreeable. In pathologic old age, senility is premature and is a disease. The seat of the disease may be anywhere or may be due to some bacterial infection.

In natural death, we die by inches. But while there is only one path by which we may enter the world, as Pearl points out in his remarkable book on death, there are many that lead to the River Styx. Death does not strike at random, but in an orderly way and there are many ways of dying. We die when an essential part of our body breaks down.

From an analysis of the mortality tables of England and Wales, the United States, and Sao Paulo, Brazil, Pearl found that over half the deaths in all three countries are due to faulty wind and food canals. While both canals are inside the body, they come in contact with air, food and water from the outside The skin also is exposed to the world, but it is armor-plate against foreign invasion. Wind and food canals have no such protecting layer of pavement cells as has the skin. Outer skin and lining of wind and food canals constitute the body's first line of defense against invasion of bacteria.

The next chief cause of death is the circulatory system; the blood is the body's second line of defense. When the first fails to check the enemy, the way to the blood is open. Hence the great part played by the circulatory system as the second great cause of death. As Pearl says, we should live much longer if our lungs were as good as our heart.

The death rates show certain important age and sex fluctuations. Early infancy deaths are heavy. There is then a sharp drop until the 10-15-year period, when the rate begins to rise to the 20-25-year period. Thereafter the rate rises slowly until the 50-55-year period, when it begins to rise again rapidly.

Nearly 60 per cent of the deaths were from organs derived from the endoderm or inner germ-layer—the layer that originally was outside the body. In the developing embryo that layer comes to be folded within the body and lines the food canal and accessory organs of digestion. It is an old-fashioned, out-of-date relic of antediluvian ectoderm. As a lining for the food canal it is our weakest spot.

Our strongest spots are the skin cover of our body and our nervous system. Both are derived from the ectoderm or outer germ-layer. Deaths from structures derived from this layer make up only about 10 per cent of the total. Almost no germs get through a healthy skin. The cells of skin and nerves have differentiated most from their primitive structure.

The remaining 30 per cent of deaths are from the mesoderm or middle germ-layer, circulatory and urogenital systems and muscles. The breakdown of the female reproductive organism is also a heavy factor in infant mortality.

While mortality due to breakdown in ectoderm organs is about the same for the two sexes, female mortality from mesoderm is as great as from endoderm breakdown twenty years before it is in males.

Death comes, then, according to Pearl, because our bodies are made up of systems specialized in structure and function. In becoming specialized, their cells have become so differentiated that they have lost the power of indefinite and independent existence. Thus the cells lining our lungs can be nourished only if the cells of the food tract and the blood keep on the job. Some systems are better made than others. The brain outwears the heart, the heart outwears the lungs.

The striking agreement as to the causes of death which Pearl finds in such dissimilar countries as England, the United States, and Sao Paulo, force him to conclude that innate constitutional factors, along with environmental factors, largely determine rates of human mortality. In certain diseases, of course, environment is the important factor.

The causes of death, Pearl finds, are in the following descending order: respiratory system; digestive system; circulatory system and blood; nervous system and sense organs; kidneys and related excretory organs; sex organs; skeletal and muscular system; skin; endocrine organs.

Fleet Captain of Yale Grid Team

Francis Thomas (Fay) Vincent, of Torrington, Conn., who was unanimously elected by his teammates to the captaincy of the 1930 Yale football team. After acting as captain of the freshman eleven two years ago, Vincent took part in practically all the games last fall, understudying Capt. Max Eddy at right tackle, but did not win his letter. He was regular right tackle on the 1929 eleven.

In addition to his football record the new captain has achieved considerable fame as a baseball player, having been varsity first baseman all last season and winning for himself a reputation as one of the most powerful hitters in college baseball.

Lucas Will Ease Burden of Manager Dan Howley

As Dan Howley goes about the task of rebuilding the crumbling pitching staff of the Cincinnati Reds one of the reddest of the Reds, Charles Fred Lucas, must be a great comfort to him. Lucas is one of the great pitchers of baseball. Last year he won 19 games for a second division club, beating his best record with the club by one game. He won 18 in 1927. In 1928 he could win only 13, for he was hurt after he had started with a great rush, compiling eight victories before he was stopped. He was the best pinch hitter in the National league in 1928, and it is always encouraging to have a pitcher on the bench, or in the game for that matter, who can hit the ball hard and often. Red batted just a few points short of .300. His ability to hit better than most pitchers is explained by the fact that he is also an infielder or outfielder. If he could not pitch he could easily qualify for a major league position in the regular lineup.

Grimes Was Failure With Pirates in '16 and '17

The strange case of Burleigh Grimes, now pitching great ball for the Pittsburgh Pirates, after being traded by the Robins and Giants for unexplained reasons, may be traced back to his youth as a major leaguer.

Burleigh Grimes, after a period of seasoning in the South, broke into the big show with the Pirates late in 1916, remaining with the Bucs in 1917 before being traded to Brooklyn. In less than two seasons with the Pirates, Grimes won 5 and lost 19 games.

It has taken a long time for Burleigh to begin "getting out of the red," so far as his record as Pirate goes, but once started he has made a rapid job of it.

Offer $1,600 Prize for South Atlantic League

There is a catch in the offer, however, because to be eligible for the cash a team will have to capture both ends of a split season.

Phelan coached the Purdue Boilermakers to their first Big Ten gridiron championship this past year, his team not being defeated.

BIG SIX WILLING TO TAKE HAWKEYES

Kansas Director of Athletics in Favor of Iowa Team.

Dr. F. C. Allen, director of athletics at Kansas university, said that any proposal to include Iowa university, ousted from the Big Ten, in the Big Six conference would be received favorably.

It had been indicated Iowa might seek membership in some other circuit.

"Our attitude toward Iowa is very friendly," Doctor Allen said. He pointed out that C. C. Williams, faculty athletic adviser at Iowa, formerly held that position at Kansas and that he had implicit confidence in his conduct of Iowa sports.

It was known Big Six officials were favorable toward a seven-team membership. Rumors came out of a conference of the schools' officials at Kansas City to the effect that a possibility was suggested whereby three Big Ten schools, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Iowa, might join with three Big Six schools, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska, to form a new conference.

In that case, Doctor Allen indicated recently, a seven-team circuit would be considered, with Oklahoma or Kansas Aggies favored to belong.

The new Ralph Jones backboard, adopted by the Western conference, is causing considerable difference of opinion among coaches and players. The Jones backboard is a plate of enameled steel, and the basket is bolted to it much more firmly than it could be on the glass bank formerly in use.

The main effect it has on the game is that being rigid the ball rebounds much more than it did from the old bank. This makes dribble-in shots harder to make, some of the players say, and on long shots the ball bounds back seven or eight feet and tends to end pileups under the basket.

"This tends to equalize the game," according to one coach. "Big men like 'Stretch' Murphy no longer hold so great an advantage of height over shorter men. A rebound going back seven or eight feet makes it impossible for a tall man to follow up and push the ball into the ring."

Looking back over all the games Army and Notre Dame had played, Coach "Biff" Jones, of the Army, vividly recalls the 1915 contest. In his talk at the Notre Dame banquet he said:

"It was only two minutes or so to play when the Army gave up the ball to Notre Dame on Notre Dame's two-yard line. I was playing in the line at the time. The first play was a punt formation with 'Little Dutch' Bergman drawing back to kick. Instead of punting he faked and ran around end, fooling us completely. He advanced to the Army 40-yard line before tackled. The next play was a successful pass for 20 yards. The ball was only 20 yards away from our goal with seconds to play and the score 0-0. Bergman let loose and other pass and it was good for a touchdown as the gun cracked. Notre Dame won, 7 to 0."

Dick Hanley, coach of the Northwestern Wildcats, says high school experience is not essential for a candidate but adds that it is better to have first-year men well grounded in fundamentals of the game. Otherwise a man is too busy learning fundamentals in his first and perhaps second year, and misses absorbing the system of play taught by the particular coach. "I'd rather have a big man with speed," Hanley says, "who has had little or no high school experience, than a star who imbibed, with his fundamentals, methods which will be a hindrance to him.

"While coaching the Haskell Indian institute I was confronted with many boys who came straight from the reservation. They had no grid experience whatsoever, yet with proper spirit developed into fine players. At the present time, though, I can't think of any of our first stringers who didn't have prep experience."

BARTON'S DYANSHINE SHOE POLISH

City Boy Might Start Motor, but Not a Horse

The lad looked to be a sophisticated son of the city as he stood on the curb in a good residential neighborhood and tried to start a horse. Perhaps he had been reading Black Beauty, perhaps he had been listening to thrilling tales of runaway horses, but whatever prompted him he was not getting results.

It was apparent half a block away that there was something wrong with his technic. He tapped the curb, snapped his fingers and even stamped his feet in exasperation, but the iceman's decrepit nag looked sleepily around his flopping blinders without even pawing the pavement.

As the woman walked nearer to the boy her ears were attuned for "Giddap, Dobbin!" or "Gee up, Bill!" But the youth belonged to the motor age and knew not the lingo of the livery. The only words that escaped his lips were, "Sic 'em, hoss, sic 'em!" —New York Sun.

WHEN IT LOOKS DARK to any weak, nervous or ailing woman, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription comes to her aid. Women in every walk of life today say Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a reliable medicine. It is made from roots and herbs, sold by druggists, in both fluid and tablets.

One woman who used it said: "I think Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the best medicine any weak woman can take, especially at middle age. When I came to that period I seemed to go right down in health, was nervous, weak and rundown. I took the 'Favorite Prescription' and found it very helpful. It strengthened me, helped my nerves and I had no more trouble and I have been very healthy since."—Mrs. Elica Lytton, 3550 Vandyke Ave., San Diego, Calif.

City Council In Session; Transact Much Business

The city council met in session Friday night, all the members being present.

A communication was read from the Southern Pacific Company saying that planks in the crossings at Encinal and Ravenswoods avenues had been put down as requested by the council some weeks ago.

A letter was read from the South San Francisco Chamber of Commerce asking the council to go on record favoring the change of the name of the Bayshore Highway to the Bayshore Boulevard. The request was granted. All members favored the proposed change.

Emmett Huff was granted a permit to conduct a pool room in the Campaigni building on the state highway.

The Pacific Telephone Company asked permission to put down poles and string wires on Middle avenue and adjoining laterals. Blake thought that a representative of the company ought to be present to explain the situation. The request was laid over and the clerk was instructed to write the concern suggesting that a representative be sent here, Commissioner Walker agreeing to go over the street with him.

A lengthy statement was submitted to the council by City Engineer George A. Kneese, on the subject of the protests filed by the property owners in Stanford Park some time ago. Kneese went fully into the vexatious question.

The area of the property claimed by the signers of the protest as filed represents a total of 2,706,003 square feet as against an area of 3,055,886 square feet remaining in the district and not being protested. This latter area does not include a strip of land being in the district lying between the southwesterly line of Stanford Boulevard and the center line of San Francisquito Creek, which area is not protested but the extent of which would be rather difficut to determine. On the basis of the above figures the total of the protested property consitutes 46.9% of the total area in the assessment district.

The report further states:

For the Council's information and to correct any false impressions which may go out regarding cost of engineering, I again want to state that this work will be handled in as economical a manner as is possible only in an organization equipped with the means and facilities to turn out this work efficiently, correctly and in line with good engineering practice. This organization specializes in municipal engineering and the interests of the property owners are given first consideration.

Following the reading of the report a general discussion followed. On motion of Walker, seconded by Blake, the council went on record that should bids be called for all such bids above the city engineer's estimate for the proposed work be rejected. Weeden thought th motion premature but it went through without a dissenting vote. The total estimate of the engineer was $88,000. Any bid above that figure will be rejected.

The council adjourned to meet on January 14.

Turkey Raiser Buys Two-Acre Tract Here

James Muray, the well-known turkey raiser, has purchased a two-acre tract on McDonald avenue, where he will continue his enterprise. Jimmie knows his turkeys. His birds are always sought after by housewives who know their merits and condition and when Thanksgiving rolls around the birds find ready sale. The Murray estate on San Francisquito Creek was recently sold for an art guild, the purchaser being Mr. Merner of the Merner Lumber Company. The adjoining land consisting of seven acres has also been bought as well as all the vacant dots on Arbor avenue, facing on the Murray property. A massive building is to be constructed on the holding very soon. It is believed that fully $250,000 will be spent in buildings this year.

The enterprise is sponsored by Stanford University.
